The screen displayed color may slightly. On a square tail longboard I recently glassed the corners of the tail had a spot where the glass didn't meet up, so I had to fill the voids with resin. I also have tough times with round-pin tails and longboard noses where I can't get the glass to wrap tightly to the corner and then when I sand the. Are float pods a case of the bigger the better?

If I go too big I'm worried about it affecting my ability to get on plain, if I go to small I am worried about wasting my money and the pods not helping at all. My transom measures 49" at the bottom and 69" at the top across, so I could fit Boyd's. The “Hi-Liner” is designed for the professional. All this combined with the superior quality finish guarantee a float.
